Abstract

This study aims to reveal the symbolic meaning of the Rebo Wekasan tradition in the perspective of the study of the Living Qur'an in the community of Cempakasari Village. This tradition is a cultural heritage that integrates Islamic values with local wisdom, which is specifically carried out on the last Wednesday of the month of Safar. This study uses a qualitative approach with ethnographic methods, involving participatory observation, in-depth interviews, and document analysis. The purpose of the research is to understand how people interpret the symbols in these rituals and their relevance to the Qur'anic values that live in their midst. The results of the study show that the Rebo Wekasan tradition not only reflects efforts to maintain social and spiritual harmony, but also becomes a medium for inheriting Islamic values that are dynamic and contextual. Symbols such as joint prayer, almsgiving, and the use of sacred water are understood as the embodiment of hope for blessings and protection from disasters, in accordance with the values contained in the Qur'an.

Introduction

Anthropologically, one of the most important aspects of human evolution is the development of culture, which characterizes humans over other creatures. The emergence of this culture is closely related to the evolution of the brain and the advancement of human thinking. Culture develops through unique communication patterns that allow humans to convey information in a behavioral manner.¹

However, humans have a special ability to use symbols for this process. The meaning of a symbol is determined by its use, so that a symbol has a wider scope of meaning than just a sign. As

Sanderson explains, symbols are dynamic and can generate new meanings according to the context in which they are used in social interactions.²

Every society has a culture, no matter how simple it is, because humans are basically cultured creatures. Culture includes various aspects of life, such as patterns of behavior, beliefs, attitudes, and works that are characteristic of a certain society or group.³

According to Jerald G and Rober, culture is a shared mental program that influences an individual's response to their environment. That is, culture is reflected in daily behavior, but it is controlled by a deeply embedded mental program. In other words, culture is not only limited to behavior that is visible on the surface, but something fundamental and firmly inherent in each individual.⁴

Indonesia is known as a country rich in traditions and cultures that are firmly rooted in religious values. One of the traditions that is still preserved in various regions is Rebo Wekasan, which is usually celebrated on the last Wednesday of the month of Safar in the Hijri calendar. This tradition is often associated with the community's belief in rejecting reinforcements and asking for protection. In its implementation, Rebo Wekasan combines elements of local culture with Islamic teachings, thus creating a tradition that is full of symbolic meaning and spiritual values.⁵

Rebo Wekasan in Cempakasari Village is an annual tradition full of meaning and solemnity, held on the last Wednesday of the month of Safar in the Hijri calendar. Local residents perform the rebo wekasan prayer in their respective homes, asking for protection from evil and blessings for the future life.

However, the Rebo Wekasan Tradition in Cempakasari Village presents a new perspective. that not all Cempakasari residents perform the Rebo Wekasan prayer, only some residents do. Apart from the pros and cons surrounding the Rebo Wekasan tradition, this tradition is also interesting to research because it reflects the behavior of Islamic society which is rooted in their understanding of the Koran. Therefore, this research is related to the phenomenon of the living Qur'an.

This research was conducted using qualitative methods, where data was collected through observation, written interviews and literature study to explore the meaning contained in this tradition and its relationship to the values of the Koran that live and are internalized in people's daily lives.⁶ This approach aims to understand in depth how this tradition is not only part of local culture. Thus, this research seeks to reveal the relationship between local traditions and religious values that live in society as a reflection of harmony between culture and religion.⁷

Rebo Wekasan* Tradition

The Rebo Wekasan tradition in Indonesia has its roots in the early days of the spread of Islam in the archipelago, which took place around the 13th century AD. Before Islam arrived, people in this region had embraced Hinduism and Buddhism.⁸ The Rebo Wekasan tradition in Indonesia is rooted in the opinion of Abdul Hamid Quds in the book Kanzun Najah wa-Surur fi Fadhail al-Azminah wa-Shubur, which states that on the last Wednesday of every year in the month of Safar, Allah sends down 32,000 reinforcements to the earth. Because of the arrival of reinforcements on that day, people are encouraged to carry out various rituals, one of which is by praying 4 rak'ahs. In each rak'ah, after reading surah al-Fatihah, continue by reading surah al-Kautsar 17 times, surah al-Ikhlâs 5 times, and surah al-Falaq and an-Naas once each. After greetings, prayers are read. This ritual is believed to be able to ask for protection from Allah to avoid evil and disasters throughout the year starting from that day.⁹

“According to the experience of local people, they usually read Surah Al Kautsar which is read 17 times during the Rebo Wekasan prayer. This practice is carried out to anticipate disasters which are believed to occur at Rebo Wekasan. Seven verses of salamun written on paper are then put into a container and poured with water, then drink the water”. (Submitted by Mrs. Neni as a resident of Cempakasari Village).¹⁰

Rebo Wekasan is a tradition carried out by some Muslim communities, especially in Java, Sunda, South Kalimantan and Bangka Belitung. The term Rebo Wekasan comes from the words “Rebo”, which means Wednesday, and “Wekasan” which means last or closing. This tradition is carried out on the last Wednesday of the month of Safar, the second month in the Hijri calendar. This tradition is celebrated by some Muslims in various regions of Indonesia, such as Palembang, Lampung, East Kalimantan, West Java, Central Java, East Java, Yogyakarta, and perhaps also by a small number of people in West Nusa Tenggara.¹¹

“In my opinion, Rebo Wekasan means the final rebo of the month of Safar. The Rebo Wekasan tradition is carried out by most Javanese and Sundanese people, including some of the Cempakasari people. There are also those who carry out the Rebo Wekasan tradition. Some people believe that on the day of Rebo Wekasan, Allah brings down many diseases and must do it. activities to repel reinforcements such as the rebo wekasan prayer.” (Submitted by Mrs. Sri as a teaching staff in Cempakasari Village).¹²

Quoted in a journal entitled “Wednesday Wekasan Traditions In Millennial Perceptions: A Study Of Students At The Faculty Of Social Sciences, UNNES” written by Rikha Zulia, et al. According to KH. Slamet Hidayat, caretaker of the Hufadzul Qur'an Islamic Boarding School (HQ) Al-Asror, the Wekasan Wednesday tradition which is carried out on the last Wednesday in the month of Safar is the result of the ijtihad of the ulama as an effort to ask for safety and avoid disaster. Even though the name Rabu Wekasan is not found in the Al-Qur'an or Hadith because it comes from Javanese, this tradition still refers to Islamic teachings which originate from the Al-Qur'an and Hadith. One of the basic references is verse 19 in the QS. Al-Qamar, which reads about "a very strong wind on that fateful day". KH. Slamet Hidayat added that every action that is seen from good morals, God willing, has a valid basis, even though we may not fully understand it. From the perspective of sharia, morals and ethics, this tradition is not prohibited in Islam and is considered a good deed.¹³

Explained in the book "Lubabul Ma'ani" or what is known as manaqib by Sheikh Abdul Qadir Al-Jailani, he states:

واعلموا ان ابلية لم تأت المؤمن تهلكه

The reinforcements and disasters given by Allah SWT, are not to destroy, but to encourage humans to make efforts. Whoever tries and is patient, Allah SWT, will replace it with a better one. The Rebo Wekasan tradition teaches us to always think well of Allah and hope for His protection from all dangers for the next year.¹⁴

Implementation of Rebo Wekasan in Cempakasari Village

Rebo Wekasan is a tradition that is often carried out by people on the last Wednesday of the month of Safar in the Hijriyah calendar. On this day, people believe that there is potential danger or disaster that could occur, so they perform various rituals to ask God for protection. One of the main activities in this tradition is the Rebo Wekasan prayer which is performed in the morning.¹⁵

The Rebo Wekasan prayer is usually held after the Fajr prayer. People who follow this tradition believe that the prayers offered on that day have special power, especially to ask for safety and protection from all kinds of disasters.

Apart from praying, there are also habits carried out by some people in Cempakasari village before carrying out activities on that day. Most people choose not to leave the house before the Rebo Wekasan prayer is finished. This is done as a form of avoidance of potential dangers that are believed to come on that day. Some people believe that if they leave the house before they have finished praying, they will be more vulnerable to bad luck or disaster.

In this way, Rebo Wekasan is not just a tradition, but is also part of the community's beliefs and way of protecting themselves and praying for safety. Although some people may not follow all aspects of this tradition, for those who do, this day has an important meaning as a moment to pray and ask God for protection.¹⁶

The symbols used to overcome danger or threats may vary in each region. In some places, people believe that by sharing apem cake, they can ward off incoming danger. The cake is considered to have symbolic power that can protect them from all kinds of disasters. However, each region has different ways and beliefs in celebrating it.¹⁷

Especially in Cempakasari village, people prefer simple but meaningful ways of dealing with threats. One of the common rituals is prayer, special prayers and giving alms. This is considered a form of request to God to be given protection and kept away from all the dangers that could come.

Apart from that, there are also traditions involving water that has been given special prayers. The water is then put into the well as a symbol of cleansing and protection. People believe that water that has been prayed for can provide blessings and be an antidote to undesirable things. All these rituals are carried out with full confidence and hope that all negative things will be kept away from their lives.

Cempakasari Community Perceptions of Rebo Wekasan

Some Cempakasari residents consider Rebo Wekasan a tradition that must be maintained because it is an ancestral cultural heritage. This tradition is considered important to preserve local cultural identity as well as a form of gratitude to God for all the blessings. According to them, maintaining this tradition is one way to maintain noble values amidst increasingly strong modernization currents.

"Some still do, but in the current era young people tend to be ignorant of traditions such as rebo wakan". (Submitted by Mrs. Sri as a teaching staff in Cempakasari Village)¹⁸

Apart from that, some people believe that the Rebo Wekasan tradition has a positive psychological and spiritual impact on society. The prayers offered during this ritual are believed to ward off disaster and bring good luck. This is their main reason for continuing to preserve this tradition.¹⁹

However, on the other hand, there are some people who reject this tradition because it is considered not in line with the teachings of certain religions, especially Islam. They think that this ritual is bid'ah, namely a practice that was not taught by the Prophet Muhammad SAW. This kind of criticism is often the main reason for conservative groups to reject the implementation of Rebo Wekasan.²⁰

"Obviously, this tradition must be abandoned because it is not a guide." (Submitted by Mr. Rijal, a religious teacher in Cempakasari village)²¹

"In Cempakasari specifically, the majority don't really understand it and don't really believe in it, maybe there are some who practice and believe in it, so it seems like they don't follow this tradition". (Submitted by Mrs. Neni as a resident of Cempakasari Village).²²

Finally, another criticism of Rebo Wekasan is related to the waste of resources. Some people believe that the costs, energy and time spent carrying out this ritual would be better allocated to productive activities or helping people in need. They argue that this tradition has no real impact on the welfare of society as a whole.²³

With this difference of opinion, the people of Cempakasari are faced with a dilemma between preserving local traditions or adapting them to the needs and challenges of modern times.

Al-Qur'an in the Rebo Wekasan Tradition

Basically, there is no evidence that explicitly recommends the implementation of the Rebo Wekasan prayer. However, one of the bases used as a reference is in QS. Al-Qamar: 19:

¹⁹ Zamzam Nurjaman dkk, "Nilai-Nilai Tradisi Rebo Wekasan Sebagai Sumber Belajar Ips," n.d.

“Indeed, We have blown a very strong wind on them on a continuous day of misfortune”.

They believe that the day referred to as the “unlucky day” in this verse falls on the last Wednesday of the month of Shafar every year, which is now known as the Rebo Wekasan tradition.

Every action that reflects noble morals basically has a valid basis in religious teachings, even though we may not fully understand the basis or arguments in depth. This shows that the good values contained in an action are always in line with Islamic principles which emphasize the importance of morality and ethics.²⁴

From the perspective of sharia, morals and ethics, this kind of tradition not only does not conflict with Islamic teachings, but is also considered a form of good deeds and has positive value. This tradition is able to strengthen relationships between people, instill a sense of mutual respect, and foster harmony in social life, so that overall it reflects the universal messages of Islam which focus on noble morals and the common good.²⁵

If someone intends it specifically, such as “I intend to pray the Shafar prayer” or “I intend to pray the Rebo Wekasan prayer”, then the prayer is considered invalid and is haram. This is in line with the principles of fiqh, namely:²⁶

والأصل في العبادة أنها إذا لم تطلب لم تصح

“The original law in worship is not recommended, then it is not valid” (Sheikh Sulaiman al-Bujairimi, Tuhfah al-Habib Hasyiyah ‘ala al-Iqna’, juz 2, p. 60).

In the book I’anatut Tholibiin it is emphasized that:

قال المؤلف في إرشاد العباد ومن البدع المذمومة التي يَأْتَمُّ فاعلها ويجب على ولاية الأمر منع فاعلها صلاة الرغائب اثنتا عشرة ركعة بين العشاءين ليلة أول جمعة من رجب وصلاة ليلة نصف شعبان مائة ركعة وصلاة آخر جمعة من

As for these prayer hadiths, they are false and invalid, do not be persuaded by people who mention them”. (Sheikh Abu Bakr bin Syatha, Panah al-Thalibin, juz 1, p. 270).

However, if the Rebo Wekasan prayer is performed with the intention of being an absolute sunnah prayer, there are different views among the ulama. Hadratussyekh KH. Hasyim Asy’ari is of the opinion that this is haram. According to him, the recommendation to perform absolute sunnah prayers based on authentic hadith only applies to prayers that have a basis in sharia. Therefore, this recommendation cannot be applied to the Rebo Wekasan prayer.²⁷

In his fatwa collection, Rais Akbar NU said in Javanese pegon:

اورا ويناع فيتواه اجاء اجاء لن علاكوني صلاة رابو وكاسان لن صلاة هدية كاع كاسبوت اع سؤال كارنا صلاة لورو ايكو ماهو اورا انا اصلى في الشرع. والدليل على ذلك خلو الكتب المعتمدة عن ذكرها كايا كتاب تقريب، المنهاج القويم، فتح المعين، التحرير لن سافندو كور كايا كتاب النهاية المذهب لن احياء علوم الدين، كايه ماهو اورا انا كاع نوتور صلاة كاع كاسبوت. الى ان قال وليس لأحد أن يستدل بما صح عن رسول الله انه قال الصلاة خير موضوع فمن شاء فليستكثر ومن شاء فليستقلل، فإن ذلك مختص بصلاة مشروعة

²⁷ muhammad Ali Asyari, “Azimat Dalam Al-Qur’an (Studi Kritis Terhadap Tafsir Al-Ibriz Karya Bisri Mustofa),” 2023.

“It is not permissible to give a fatwa, invite and perform the Rebo Wekasan prayer and the gift prayer mentioned in the question, because these two prayers have no basis in the Shari’a. The tendency is that the books that can be used as a basis do not mention it, such as the books al-Taqrīb, al-Minhaj al-Qawim, Fath al-Mu’in, al-Tabrīr and the books above them such as al-Nihayah, al-Muhadzab and Ihya’ Ulum al-Din. None of these books mention it. “No one should argue about their ability to perform these two prayers with the authentic hadith that the Prophet said, prayer is the best place, make more or less, because in fact this hadith only refers to the prescribed prayers”. (KH. Hasyim Asy’ari as quoted from the collection of PWNU East Java Bahtsul Masail Results).

According to Sheikh Abdul Hamid bin Muhammad Quds al-Maki, the law is permissible. According to him, one way to allow these prayers which are declared haram in the Nash of the Fuqaha’ is to intend to do them as absolute sunnah prayers.²⁸ He emphasized:

قلت ومثله صلاة صفر فمن أراد الصلاة في وقت هذه الأوقات فليנו النفل المطلق فرادى من غير عدد معين وهو ما لا يتقيد بوقت ولا سبب ولا حصر له . انتهى

“I am of the opinion that what is forbidden is the Shafar prayer (Rebo wekasan), so whoever wants to pray during these forbidden times, he should perform the absolute sunnah prayer alone without a certain number of rak’abs. Absolute sunnah prayer is a prayer that is not limited to a certain time or reason and has no rak’ab limits”. (Sheikh Abdul Hamid bin Muhammad Quds al-Maki, Kanz al-Najah wa al-Surur, p. 22).

The Rebo Wekasan prayer is explained in detail, including the procedures and prayers, by Sheikh Abdul Hamid Quds in the book Kanz al-Najah wa al-Surur. A similar explanation is also found in the works of Sheikh Ibn Khatiruddin al-Athar, al-Jawahir al-Khams. This prayer is usually performed in various regions, both in congregation and alone. Regarding the law, there are differences of opinion among the ulama, which is normal, where each has its own basis for argument.²⁹

The Rebo Wekasan prayer has given rise to various views among the ulama. The majority of ulama are of the opinion that this prayer does not have a strong foundation in the Shari'a, so that carrying it out with special intentions is considered invalid and even haram, as emphasized by KH. Hasyim Asy'ari and other scholars. However, there are also scholars such as Sheikh Abdul Hamid bin Muhammad Quds who allow this prayer, as long as it is intended as an absolute sunnah prayer without being tied to a certain time, cause or number of rak'ahs.³⁰ This tradition is often carried out as an expression of goodness and moral values in social life, even though it is not explicitly supported by the Shari'a. Therefore, it is important to carry it out with great care, both in adapting the intention of worship to religious teachings and in maintaining social harmony.³¹

Conclusion

The Rebo Wekasan tradition in Cempakasari Village is a form of acculturation between Islamic values and local community wisdom. This tradition is carried out as a spiritual effort to ask for protection from disaster which is believed to occur on the last Wednesday of the month of Safar. Even though it does not have a firm basis in the Koran or Hadith, this practice is accepted by some people as cultural heritage that contains religious values.

Implementation of the Rebo Wekasan tradition involves various activities such as sunnah prayers, group prayers, reading the Yasin letter, and almsgiving. Prayer water is also used as a symbol of blessing and protection. All of these activities show people's understanding of the importance of drawing closer to Allah and asking for salvation in everyday life.

However, the implementation of the Rebo Wekasan tradition has sparked debate among the community. Some consider it a form of worship that is full of meaning, while others criticize it as bid'ah because it does not have a sharia basis. Criticism also arises from a practical point of view, with questions regarding the relevance of this tradition in increasingly rational modern life.

From a Living Qur'an perspective, the Rebo Wekasan tradition can be understood as a form of contextualization of Al-Qur'an values in the lives of local communities. Even though it does not directly come from the Koran, this tradition illustrates how Muslim communities try to live up to religious values in daily practices that are appropriate to their cultural environment.

Overall, the Rebo Wekasan tradition can be seen as a form of harmony between religion and culture. However, critical study is needed so that this tradition remains relevant and does not deviate from Islamic principles. With a wise approach, this tradition can continue to be preserved as part of the cultural heritage that reflects the spiritual and social identity of the people of Kampung Cempakasari.
